Franziska Herring writes Online habits

Did you know that the average person in the developed world adds 135 kilogrammes of CO2 to their carbon footprint with the emails they send and receive? That's equivalent to an extra 199 miles driven in a car. We can't see the impact our electronic communication has on our carbon footprint, but the huge server centres springing up all over the world for cloud computing tell a frightening story. Of course, inventions like Bitcoin gobble up by far the largest amount of that power, but we can still be careful about the amount of stuff we send and receive electronically.

Also ... let's have a think about our churches. How could they be more ecologically friendly? ... What about an Eco audit? Contact Barbara Brooks and she can give you some help.

The Cannock Chase Methodist Preaching Plan for the next quarter (Dec 2021 – Feb 2022) is now available.
